WIOA WORK-BASED TRAINING

Definitions and types of Work-Based Learning

On-the-Job Training

On-the-Job Training (OJT) is defined by the Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA) in Section 3(44) as training by an employer that is provided to a paid participant while engaged in productive work in a job that provides knowledge or skills essential the full and adequate performance of the job; is made available through a program that provides reimbursement to the employer of up to 50 percent of the wage rate of the participant (certain exceptions up to 75 percent) for the extraordinary costs of providing the training and additional supervision related to the training; and is limited in duration as appropriate to the occupation for which the participant is being trained, taking into account the content of the training, the prior work experience of the participant, and the service strategy of the participant, as appropriate.

Customized Training

Customized Training is defined as training designed to meet the special requirements of an employer (including a group of employers); that is conducted with a commitment by the employer to employ an individual upon successful completion of the training; and for which the employer pays for a significant cost of the training, as determined by the LWDB in accordance with the factors in WIOA Section 3(14).

Incumbent Worker Training

Incumbent Worker Training is designed to meet the special requirements of an employer (including a group of employers) to retain a skilled workforce or avert the need to lay off employees by assisting the workers in obtaining the skills necessary to retain employment.

Internships or Work Experience

An Internship or Work Experience is a planned, structured, learning experience that takes place in a workplace for a limited period of time. Internships and other Work Experience may be paid or unpaid.

Transitional Employment

A transitional job is one that provides a time-limited work experience that is wage-paid and subsidized, and is in the public, private, or non-profit sectors for those individuals with barriers to employment who are chronically unemployed or have inconsistent work history, as determined by the Local WDB

Requirements for On-the-Job Training

Payments to employers for On-the-Job Training are considered training payments made to a training provider (the employer) as cost reimbursement for training services received and, as such, is not to be marketed as a 'wage subsidy' or 'wage reimbursement program'. The fair market value of the payment is determined to be equal to a percentage of the hourly wage the trainee receives in consideration of the costs incurred by the employer for providing the training service.

On-the-job training (OJT) is provided under a contract with an employer or registered apprenticeship program in the public, private non-profit, or private sector. Through the OJT contract, occupational training is provided for the WIOA participant in exchange for the reimbursement for the extraordinary costs of providing the training and supervision related to the training. Employer reimbursement is typically up to 50 percent of the wage rate of the WIOA participant.

OJT contracts must not be entered into with an employer who has received payments under previous contracts (under WIOA or WIA) if the employer has exhibited a pattern of failing to provide OJT participants with continued long-term employment as regular employees with wages and employment benefits (including health benefits) and working conditions at the same level and to the same extent as other employees working a similar length of time and doing the same type of work. Examples of a pattern of failure would include but are not limited to:

- 1) terminating an OJT employee or multiple OJT employees without sound justification shortly after the end of the OJT contract
- 2) paying OJT employees a substantially lower wage than other employees at the same level after the end of the OJT contract
- 3) not providing OJT employees with employment benefits after the end of the OJT contract

As part of required follow-up services under WIOA, the LWDB should regularly monitor the status of OJT employees after the OJT contract has ended to check for potential patterns of failure.

OJT contracts must be limited to the period of time required for a participant to become proficient in the occupation for which the training is being provided. To determine appropriate contract length, consideration should be given to the skill requirements of the occupation, the academic and occupational skill level of the participant, prior work experience, and the participant's Individual Employment Plan (IEP).

OJT contracts may be written for eligible employed workers when the employee is not earning a self-sufficient wage or wages comparable to or higher than wages from previous employment, as determined by LWDB policy; when the requirements of 20 CFR 680.700 are met; and the OJT relates to the introduction of new technologies, new production or service procedures, upgrading to new jobs that require additional skills, workplace literacy, or other appropriate purposes identified by the LWDB.

OJT payments to employers are considered compensation for the extraordinary costs associated with training participants. Potentially there is lower productivity of participants during the OJT. Employers are not required to document such extraordinary costs. Employers may be reimbursed up to 50 percent (50%) of the wage rate of an OJT participant. In certain instances the LWDB may raise the OJT training reimbursement rate up to 75 percent (75%). The LWDB must take into account the following factors when increasing the reimbursement rate of OJT contracts:

- 1) characteristics of the participants considering whether they are individuals with barriers to employment defined in WIOA Sec. 3(24);
- 2) the size of the business, with an emphasis on small business;
- 3) the quality of the employer-provided training and advancement opportunities;
- 4) other factors the LWDB may determine to be appropriate, which may include the number of employees participating, wage and benefit levels (both during and after completion of the OJT), and relation of the training to the competitiveness of the participant.

LWDBs must document (via local policy and participant case notes) the factors used when deciding to increase the wage reimbursement level above 50 percent (50%). The maximum OJT reimbursement rate must not exceed 75 percent (75%).

OJT contracts may be entered into with registered apprenticeship program sponsors or participating employers in the registered apprenticeship programs for the OJT portion of the registered apprenticeship. Both Individual Training Account (ITA) and OJT funds may be used when placing participants in the registered apprenticeship program.

Requirements for Customized Training

Customized training can be used for both unemployed and employed workers and must be conducted with a commitment by the employer (including a group of employers) to employ an individual upon successful completion of the training, and employers must pay for a significant cost of the training. Customized training can only be used for employed workers when the employee is not earning a self-sufficient wage or wages comparable to or higher than wages from previous employment as determined by LWDB policy; and the training relates to the introduction of new technologies, introduction to new production or service procedures, upgrading to new jobs that require additional skills, workplace literacy or other appropriate purposes identified by the LWDB.

The State Workforce Board considers an employer (or group of employers) contributing 51% or more to the cost of the training to be significant.

Requirements for Incumbent Worker Training

Incumbent Worker Training (IWT) is designed to meet the needs of an employer or group of employers to retain a skilled workforce or avert layoffs. IWT is not permitted to be used to provide training for new hires. IWT can be used to either:

- help avert layoffs of employees as part of a lay-off aversion strategy, or
- obtain the skills necessary to retain employment, such as increasing the skill levels of employees so they can be promoted with the company and create backfill opportunities.

A LWDB may use up to 20 percent (20%) of their Adult and Dislocated Worker funds to provide the federal share of the IWT cost.

LWDB's must determine an employer's eligibility for participating in IWT based on the following factors which help to evaluate whether training would increase the competitiveness of the employees or both the employees and the employer:

- The characteristics of the individuals in the program (e.g. individuals with barriers to employment);
- Whether the training improves the labor market competitiveness of the employees or both the employees and the employer; and
- Other factors the LWDB may consider appropriate, including:
 - the number of employees participating in the training;
 - wage and benefit levels of those employees (both pre- and post-training earnings);
 - the existence of other training and advancement opportunities provided by the employer;
 - credentials and skills gained as a result of the training;
 - layoffs averted as a result of the training;
 - utilization as part of a larger sector and/or career pathway strategy; or
 - employer size

For an employer to receive IWT funds, the individual(s) receiving training must be employed, meet the Fair Labor Standards Act requirements for an employer-employee relationship, and employment history requirement - have an established employment history with the employer for 6 months or more (which may include time spent as a temporary or contract worker performing work for the employer receiving IWT funds).

There is one exception to the six month requirement, which is that in the event incumbent worker training is being provided to a cohort of employees, not every employee in the cohort must have an established employment history with the employer for six months or more as long as a majority of those employees being trained meet the employment history requirement.

An incumbent worker does not have to meet the eligibility requirements for career and training services for adults and dislocated workers under WIOA, unless they are receiving career and/or training services in addition to (not a part of) incumbent worker services.

Generally, IWT should be provided to private sector employers; however, there may be instances where non-profit and local government entities may be the recipients of IWT funds.

A LWDB shall establish the non-Federal share of the training cost by taking into consideration such other factors as the number of employees participating in the training, the wages and benefit levels of the employees (both pre- and post-training earnings), the relationship of the training to the competitiveness of the employers and employees, and the availability of other employer-provided training and advancement opportunities. The non-Federal share shall not be less than:

- 10 percent (10%) of the cost for employers with not more than 50 employees;
- 25 percent (25%) of the cost for employers with more than 50 employees but not more than 100 employees;
- 50 percent (50%) of the cost for employers with more than 100 employees.

The non-Federal share provided by an employer may include the wages paid by the employer to the participant while the participant is attending the training.

IWT contracts shall not be approved for employees who will receive a wage rate less than the prevailing wage for the local labor shed.

Requirements for Internships and Work Experience

An Internship or Work Experience is a structured learning experience that takes place in a workplace for a limited period of time. Transitional Employment is type of Work Experience. Although Internships and Work Experience are not considered training services, Local Workforce Development Boards may include these expenditures when calculating the training percentage towards the Training Expenditure Policy 5-07-00.

Internships and Work Experience may be paid or unpaid, as appropriate and consistent with other laws, such as the Fair Labor Standards Act. Internships and Work Experience may be arranged within the private for profit sector, the non-profit sector, or the public sector. Labor standards apply in any work experience setting where an employee/employer relationship, as defined by the Fair Labor Standards Act, exists.

Requirements for Transitional jobs

Transitional jobs are a type of Work Experience LWDBs may provide and are considered an individualized career service. As a type of Work Experience, transitional jobs are a Career Service, rather than Training Service. Transitional jobs are time-limited and wage-paid Work Experiences that are subsidized up to 100 percent (100%). Transitional jobs can be in the public, private or nonprofit sectors, but are only available for individuals with barriers to employment who are chronically unemployed or have an inconsistent work history as determined by the LWDB.

Transitional jobs provide the participant with work experience with the context of an employee-employer relationship where the program provider acts as the employer. This service must be combined with career and supportive services. Transitional jobs must be designed to establish work history for the participant, demonstrate success in the workplace and develop the skills necessary for unsubsidized employment. For Transitional jobs there is no requirement that the employer retain the participant upon completion, however, retention, where appropriate is preferred. LWDBs may use up to 10 percent (10%) of their combined total of adult and dislocated worker funds to provide Transitional jobs.

If LWDBs decide to use Transitional jobs as a local strategy, LWDBs must adopt policies that include plans for reimbursement amounts, supportive services that must be included, and limits on the duration of Transitional jobs. LWDBs must also define and identify participants who are chronically unemployed or have inconsistent work history. LWDBs are encouraged to target individuals who are long-term unemployed, ex-offenders, and individuals who are currently receiving or have exhausted TANF benefits. LWDBs must also identify appropriate employers to act as host sites for Transitional job placements.

Transitional jobs must be combined with comprehensive career services and supportive services.
